

ABOUT LIZ DAY

My insurance career started in 2007 as the long-term care insurance professional for a large retirement-focused financial planning firm. As I learned more about the value of asset protection in retirement, it became evident that long-term care insurance should be part of my and my husband's personal financial plans. I put policies in place for us, and with policies in-hand, filed them away assuming we wouldn't need them until the distant future. A few years later my husband developed serious health issues. He went on claim and the policy that I never expected to use so soon provided benefits that allowed me to stop working and remain home with him until he improved. I am passionate about sharing this personal experience with others.

I have a Master's degree in education from Marywood University and spent many years in the classroom teaching financial literacy. Beautiful Lancaster County Pennsylvania is my home.
